“ While serving as senior minister at First United Methodist Church of Montgomery, Alabama, I observed firsthand for many years the wonderful life that Priscilla Clark Clements lived. She was so very active in the life of our congregation and always served with a smile on her face.

Henry Ward Beecher once said, "When the sun goes below the horizon, the sun is not set. The heavens glow for a full hour after its departure. And when good people set, the sky of the world is luminous long after they are out of our sight. Such people cannot die out of this world, for when they go, they leave behind them so much of themselves."

I give thanks to God that Priscilla left behind so much of herself. I know that I am a better person from having known her. May she rest in peace.
