“ He was the best father in the whole world. I love him so much. I was glad that I got to be there with him to help him out. He has not always had the best life but he made the best of what he had. He taught all of his children to be sting independent people. Work hard for what you want. I have always honored that. I was the one that went to work straight out of high school. I have worked at the same job for over 25 years. My dad said work hard and you will be rewarded in the end. Dad and I have sat and talked about things over the years. He told me that he had made piece with God. When his time comes he will be ready. But no one is really ready to go. His biggest worry that he had was wondering what would happen to me. I told him he don't have to worry I will be fine. Ever since dad passed I have been stronger day by day. That is what he would want. Just remember that dad was rock. He was my everything. I was the same for him.

“ Sidney was a unique man and I loved him. When we would talk about God, and salvation through Jesus Christ he would respond by saying, "I know the man up stairs" or in some other way. But no one has any right to judge him, because it was between him and God, and if he ever said the sinner's prayer it was between him and God, I don' know! He had his ways of going about life, and that's the way he lived. However, in my heart I want to believe there was a time when he made things right with God. He had many good times and went through many hard times like most of us. And he is the third brother who has died in my family, and it started with the youngest, next to the second oldest, and now the third oldest. There something about that that doesn't seem logical to the world, and me. Only God knows why it happened the way it did. What's really important is that his precious daughter Cathy, have someone to look over and care for her as she did for him. Being the last of the four cuts me out due to my age of 89 in just over two months 89... However, this I know God will be there for her and those who will help. God blees!
